WORLD EARTH DAY

The Earth Day was celebrated in SGRRU on the April 22, 2025. The occasion was graced by Dr. Prof. G. Ramalakshmi, Dean college of nursing , all HODs and all faculty members. The program started at 10:30am . The entire earth day program was lead by Students nurses' associations committee and team who coordinated and helped the audience in performing various activities.

The day is being marked by a series of events happening across the globe either on or close to Earth Day itself. The event types range from talks in schools to educate young people about climate change, through to public cleanups of beaches. The challenge of climate change can seem impossible to solve alone. In reality, each of us can have a positive impact even with smaller actions or changes.

The main aim for World Earth Day 2025 is to realize that each of our unconscious actions, no matter how insignificant we may think it is, has a direct impact on the environment and planet Earth. We all must be collectively responsible for our actions, and deliberate positive initiatives to benefit the Earth. Earth Day is important because it's a day when we all come together to do our bit as responsible citizens. Specifically, it's for people who care about where they live, including protecting our planet for future generations.
